Don't forget

It's That Time Again

It's 6:00 am, the sun is shining bright, skies are blue, and the guy on the radio said it was 65 degrees already. So you can't figure out why your alarm was going off so early in the morning. You think for a second, "What's today?" It's Tuesday, but that's no big news. You roll back over, figuring you're having some weird dream. Then your mom comes in yelling, "What are you still doing in bed? You have to get ready for school!" What?? That wasn't today, was it? Oh yeah, it's the "first day" of school - again.

By the time 7:30 rolls around, sleepy-eyed students, still in shock from the early hour, have filled the building just buzzing with excitement.

For freshmen, this day is the first of new beginnings, checking out all the new faces, and finally being set free from the middle school. They are frustrated over the crowded hallways, getting lost, and trying to get to Wapping on time. Oh well, only four years to go!

Sophomores can handle coming back - they are no longer freshmen. The idea of going back to school does not thrill them, but they figure, only a few months 'til Christmas!

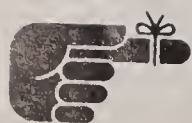

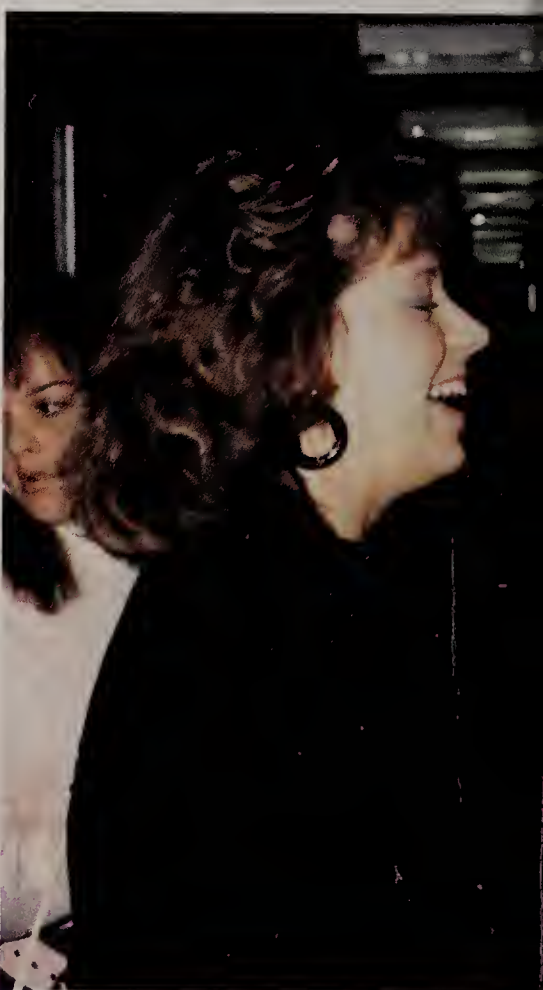

Many juniors are excited not only because they are at long last upper-classmen, but they can finally provide their own transportation (or know someone else who can provide it for them).

Now for seniors, no more humiliating public transportation, this day starts their last year at S.W.H.S. They've waited three long years for this. Three long years for the auditorium posters ("Seniors At Last!", "The Funz Just Begun") and the magazine rep's "sell - and - make - money - it's - so - easy" speech. Where would we be without these small pleasures?

It's 1:52 pm - finally. The hum of voices fills the hallways once again. The agony of the first day is over. If they survived the first day, they can handle 179 more.

President Tobj Gozdeck addresses the senior class, to get them psyched for the year ahead.

With the doors wide open ahead of them, two students approach the new year.

Nicole Francis embraces a friend, after a long summer of separation.

Matt DiCorleto stares at his schedule, wondering how long it will take to fix it this time.

The hall was the place to be on the first day. It seemed like everyone was there.

Don't forget...

Friendships

Years from now we will look back and smile with the memory of times shared with friends. Perhaps little arguments among friends, or the fits of uncontrollable laughter will grace a future day's thought. The difficulty of Physics and the cold snowy walks to Wapping will not bring frowns in years to come. We will laugh to ourselves remembering those times. The thing is though, keeping in touch with all the people we would like to may be impossible, there will always be certain people with whom we will be close. The friend who was always there always will be. The friend who made you laugh when you thought your world was ending will stay with you. That special person you told all your hopes and dreams will think of you, as you think of them. Special friendships have grown through the years as we have, and now, as we move on, we carry them with us. We carry the laughter and we carry the tears, but most of all we carry memories of some of the best years of our lives, memories that we will keep forever, the best of times, with the best of friends.

Good friends, Karen Henry and Stephanie Baver, sit down for a bite to eat.

Good Times

Good times in S.W.? What? Where? I think that everyone has asked the inevitable question, "What are we going to do tonight?" If there isn't a wild party going on, there's always DQ or 7-11 to satisfy our boredom.

During school the good times keep on rollin' as we hang out in the halls with our friends, chat during lunch, and hold deep conversations on the cruise to Wapping. Speaking of cruising, isn't that the ultimate past-time? Be it after school, Friday night or Sunday afternoon, cruising around in a car full of friends with the radio blaring and absolutely no destination in mind has got to be the best of times. However, there are times when we really do go places. Movies are the good old standby; there is always something playing. When concerts come along we don't have to ask what we're going to do.

Spring and summer, we hang out at Lake Com-pounce, Riverside or Wickham Park -playing frisbee, being obnoxious, and just having fun. From beach trips in the summer to skiing in the winter we thrive on these good times. There are good times in S.W., you just have to go out and find them.

Brad Bishop, Mike Lane, Tod Gozdeck, and Rob Lamoureux have a little fun with the cameraman.

Friends are a forever kind of thing, especially when sharing a good time.

✧ Student Life

We students know that there are a lot less than 24 hours in a day during the school year to do everything that you want to do. For many, the school day does not end at 1:52; it continues for those who choose to pursue other interests. It may be setting up the lights for drama, arguing over over a short story at a literary magazine meeting, or putting in a long night slaving away at Super Heartland. It is enduring that 'last mile' in a crucial or concentrating on routine. Relief schedule comes on Cruising around the through a Reese's Friendly's or night movie at the are some of the on the weekends that extra time clubs, music, drama and organizations a little less fatigueing. There's homework to be done, reports to be written and TV to be watched to fill in our already otherwise tight schedules.

Ode to a Man called Foley

What a guy! This man has become not only our teacher, but our leader and our mentor. He is a man of concentration, dedication, and commitment. A leader with a supportive following. This man is Stephan Foley.

This year the whole senior class had the opportunity to decide who the yearbook would be dedicated to. What better person, then Mr. Foley!?!

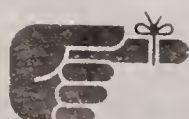

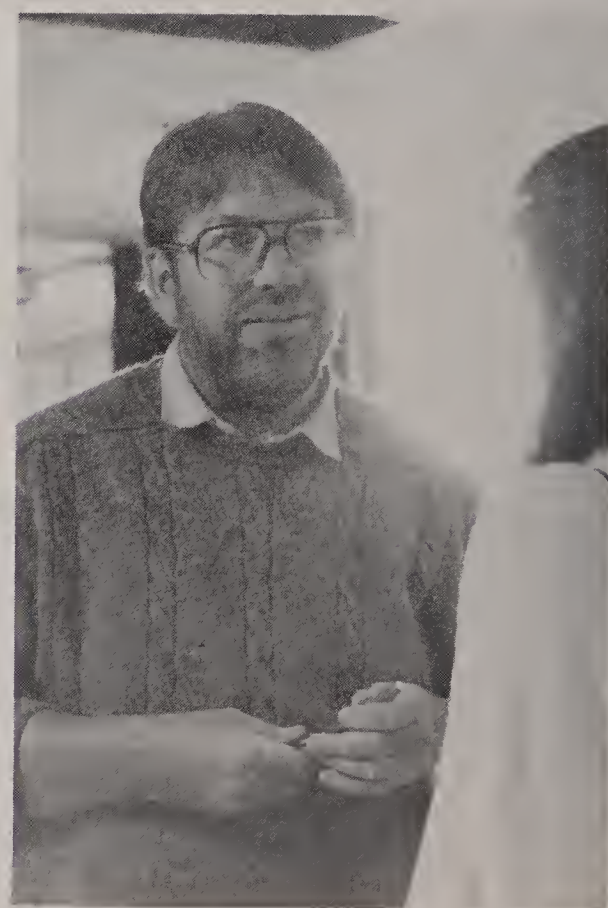

Many have seen Mr. Foley walking about the halls, always ready to help or simply be a friend. Others of us have seen him as an educator, a director, and even as a poet. As an educator, he has found ways to make the classroom scene an enjoyable experience. In his director role, he attempts to make better actors/actresses of us all, teaching us to learn more about ourselves through the characters we portray on stage. As a poet, he creates moving works of art that express his innermost feelings.

There is little that can be said as thanks to a man who has given South Windsor High School and its students so much. He is something special and a small way in which we may express our gratitude is in the dedication of our book to you.

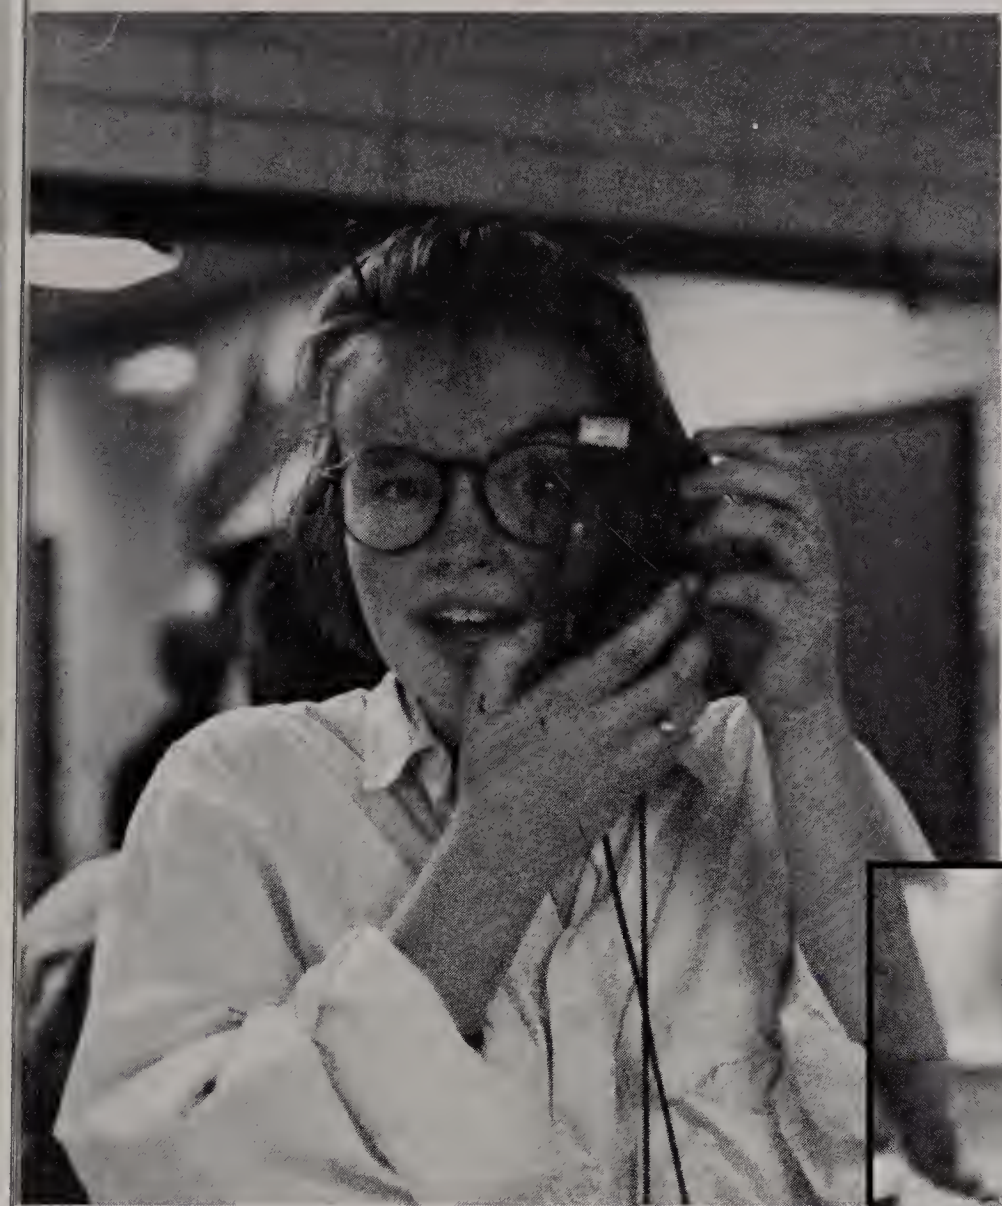

As the director, he pauses in thought, allowing the budding actors to feel his emotion.

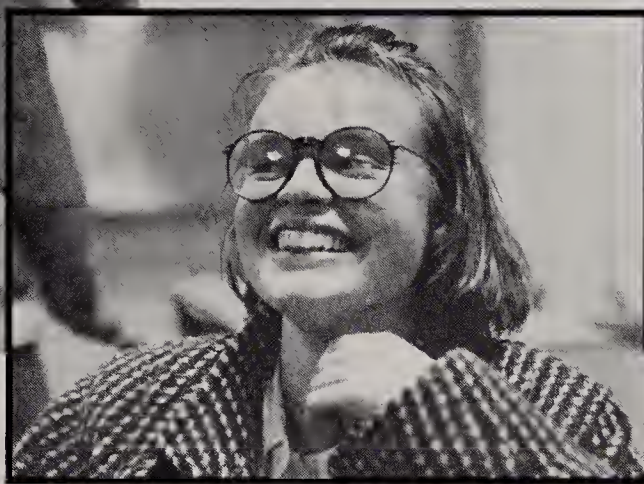

With his best wisdom, he considers the various possibilities proposed by a student.

Barbie and Ken

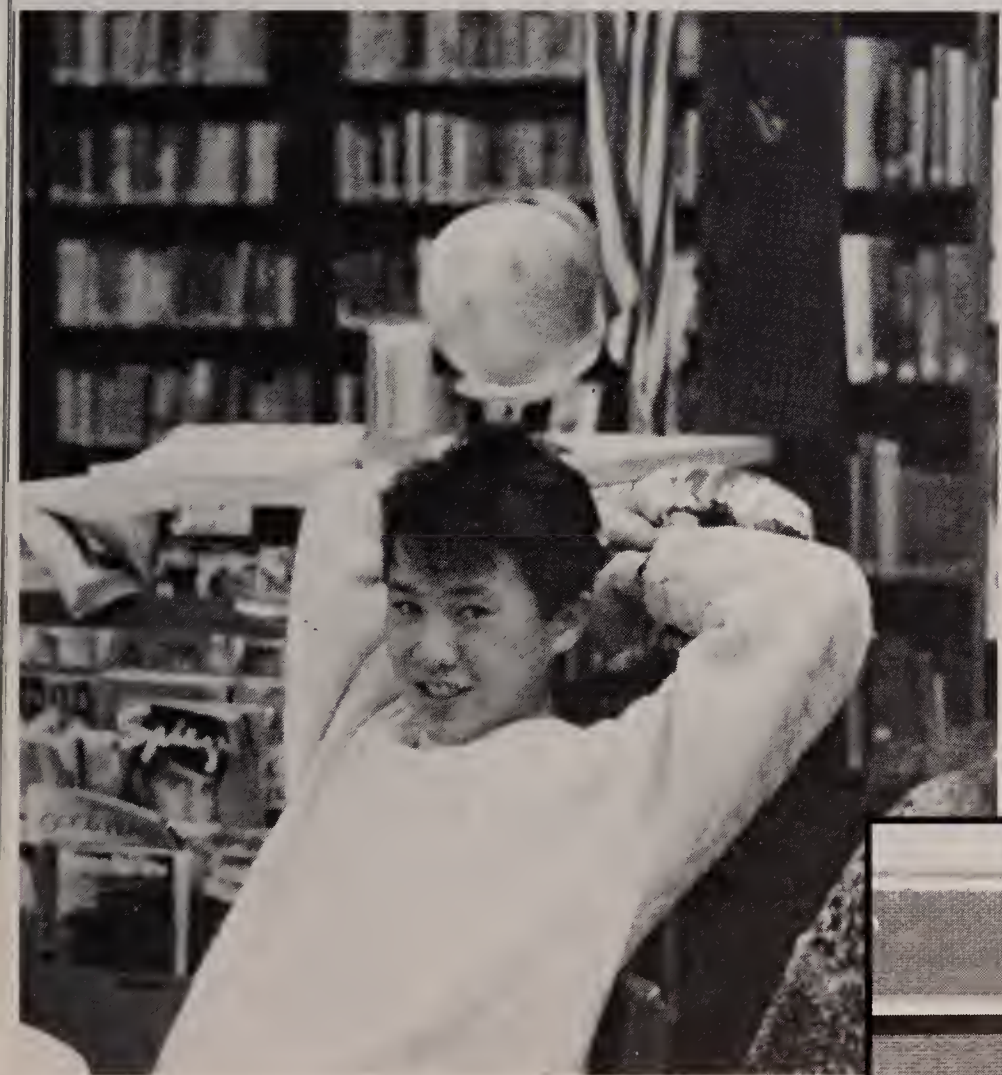

It's a grey Friday morning. Barbara Van Der Meulen, our exchange student from Holland, speaks vibrantly and enthusiastically. When asked what she is looking forward to this year, Barbara responds that she is looking forward to everything. "It's one whole new experience for me," she says. "The year is all one thing, really. It's not broken down into bits. I'm looking forward to all of it."

"I like people," she states when asked what she finds interesting in a person. "Just humans, as long as they're themselves." She likes to see "honesty, a sense of humor, and natural behavior. That's all - I don't care about the rest."

As far as her future is concerned, Barbara has some plans and dreams like the rest of us. She says she would like to marry George Michael, "because I like unshaven faces," and then travel about the world. However, she would still want to continue her studies. "I like going to school, I just despise the homework. That's all."

Here's to Barbara and her year here - may it be all she hoped it would be.

Ken Morihisa, our exchange student from Tokyo, Japan, attended a boarding school back home. When asked what he likes best about American H.S., Ken grinned sheepishly and admitted that only boys attended his Japanese H.S.; he apparently does not find American girls harmful to his education. He likes his classes and the social scene outside of class, but he has not gotten used to having to depend on other people for transportation.

School is frightening for him. He finds it difficult to follow some of the lessons. Sometimes he's afraid that he won't understand what somebody says to him. Some of the faces are still strange, but people are open, and he's become friendly with kids from his classes and the soccer team.

At first he was homesick, but he likes his host family, and learning English makes him feel more at home. Yet he still checks the mailbox religiously each day. Suddenly, his face lights up and beaming he says, "Yesterday - I catch two letters!"

Trials and Tribulations

You're sitting in a chair at your psychoanalyst's office. He's just finished flashing ink blots at you, and now he says to tell him the first thing that comes to your mind when he offers you a word. He says "up", you say "down". He says "red", you say "strawberry". He says "high school"... uh-oh, now what?

There are a number of things one could say to respond to this, after all, high school is just like one of those ink blots: anyway you look at it, it's gotta make you think of something. You might think of friends, or homework, or mock meat burgers, but what about the down side of high school life? Did any of you ever automatically think "stress", "ulcers", or "nervous breakdown"? Needless to say, high school is not all fun and frolic, it means trials and tribulations too.

When you hear about high school, you'll usually hear it portrayed as glamorous, as fun, as a big social event - a "learning experience" they call it. But what of the cost of that "learning experience"? The fact of the matter is, underneath all of that candy coating lies a bitter center for many. It's time we acknowledge its existence.

First of all, take a look at something as simple and routine as homework. No big deal, right? Afterall it's fun to go to school for six hours, go to practice for two, go home, and change for four hours of work. It's even more enjoyable to then come home again for the additional hours spent flipping through pages, wallowing in equations, and scratching meaningless words on paper. Talk about relaxation. Just like a week in the Bahamas.

In addition to the scholastic pressures, you've got your emotional traumas as well. Remember all those dances you spent heartbroken, the breakup with your steady, the fights with mom and dad, the times you waited for someone to call - and they didn't.

At one time or another, we've all experienced something that we would gladly forget if we could, but we can't forget that trials and tribulations are part of high school too.

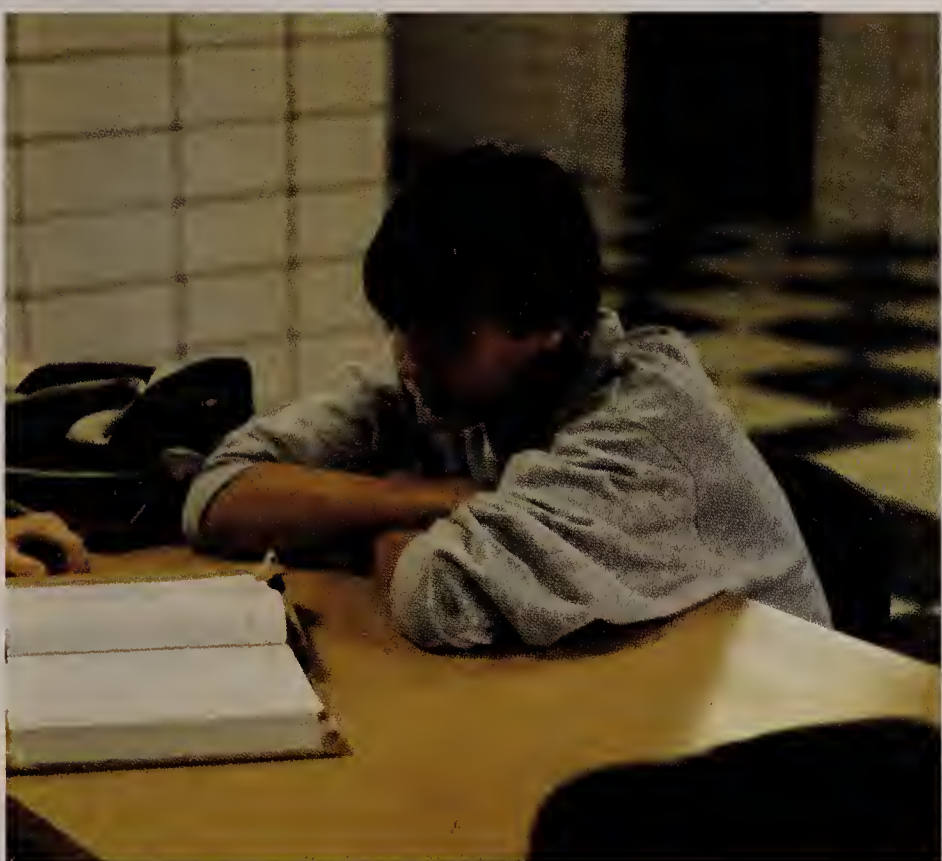

Senior Dave Kaplan agonizes over one of the more difficult problems of... math, maybe?

"Okay, four laps or give me 40!"

Again, students venture on the long, tiring journey from Wapping Annex back to the High School.

With a deep sigh, Ted Kowaleski stares at his book, attempting to force himself to do homework.

"Aagghh!!! I have to chaperone another trip?!?" Poor Mr. Cloutman, we promise we'll be good...

Rebellion

It is because of these trials and tribulations - that we now rebel. Who are the real rebels anyway? There are those who terrorize the school with graffiti and vandalism. Each day there seem to be less doors on the bathroom stalls and more appearances of multicolored threats, statements of love, and maybe a little abstract art all along the walls. Are they making a statement? They are the hidden rebels who never leave a name, but always have the satisfaction of knowing they made their mark on this school.

Then there are the

Rules are made to be broken rebels who, without a second thought, cut school and do anything, to try and forget that they should be here.

Some people stay home and sleep, but the real rebels are the people who go on adventures to Wickham Park, the beach, maybe even hit a mall or two - obviously making the statement that they would rather be someplace else, anywhere but here.

Everyone should be a rebel once in a while, somehow it feels better - whatever the consequences.

Rebellion is an attitude, a contradiction to rules and regulations. It's a statement of discontent and a laugh in the face of boredom. Once in a while it becomes a necessity - it seems to make up for the restrictions we do endure.

Jamie Sirhal, a junior rebel smoker, ponders for a moment while taking a drag.

To Each His Own

Everywhere you look, everyday of the year, there's something going on around here. Walk down the halls and listen to it: a group of kids singing, a trombone player practicing and a string instrument warming up. Stop at an open door and watch it: a heated Social Studies debate, an English lecture, or the buzzing bodies in a graphics room. Sit in on a class and experience it: utter confusion in Calculus, interview exercises in Journalism and learning games in Psychology.

There's something happening everywhere you turn. There's a couple of girls giggling in the hall, three guys bragging about their cars in a (supposedly quiet) study hall, there's a coed group walking to Wapping being loud, rude, and obnoxious, but having a good time.

The clock strikes 1:52 and out they run: a football player to the locker room, a lacrosse player to the field, yearbookies to the graphics room and the rest to home or work. Lest we forget all the other clubs and organizations and teachers meetings that get underway at 2:00.

Listen to it, see it, experience it, student life at South Windsor High is an activity that seems like a full time job. Believe us, it won't be easy to forget it!!

The field hockey team relaxes in the sun, while they listen to their coaches.

Tony Bogoslofski fiddles with a camera in the graphics room.

Elyssa Clymer attempts to explain to Nick Georgeadis that there is, indeed, life beyond football.

Underclassmen, Addie Sherman and Courtney Vanderbeck, look for friends before a class meeting.

Spectrum members engage in a flurry of activities before class begins.

Summertime

It's Summer, that two month period of time free from any scholastic intervention. And how do we fill this void absent of public education? "The possibilities are endless" as they say. Many students opt for the most boring and necessary of all alternatives: the full-time job. Many people find themselves trapped at any of the local franchises, corporations, or retail centers. There are those who fill their time at a number of camps, beach houses, and higher education facilities. There are those who stay home with their derrieres surgically implanted in front of the television watching soap operas and Tom and Jerry reruns. And there are those who camp out by the swimming pool, parade about the state beaches, or in desperation, they may frequent the ever popular Spring Pond.

Of course there is more to summer than this. But some of the most important things to remember about Summer are not the things that we do, but those that are no longer required: the whole educational experience. But then again, we can't forget that summer must come to an end. Good-bye fun and frolic, hello school...again.

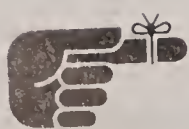

Jeff Lyga, Ted Danigelis and Pat O'Neill soak up some sun on one of only many humid days this past summer.

Craig Skilton found himself working at Bess Eaton for the last few weeks of the summer.

Margie Callan, Teri Lanza and J.J. Brown spent a weekend in year-book seminars at Bryant College.

Let Those Notes Fly

What is music?
It's like a drug. Get the right music pumping through the system and its an automatic reaction -- the foot begins banging its heel in rhythm, blood rushes a little bit faster, and you have a sudden urge to either sing or bang your head against something. Let's take a look at some diverse music types:

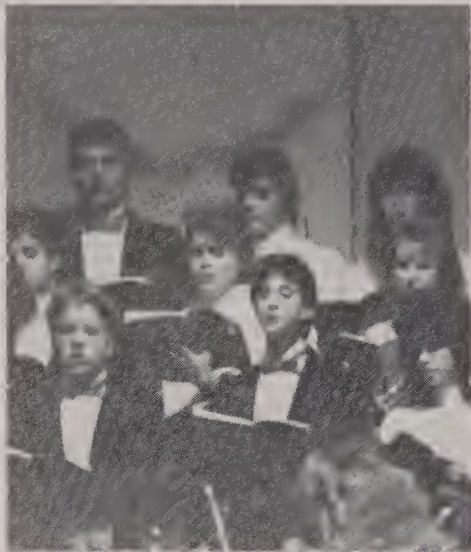

Gidget tunes: most commonly classified as "Top 40," this catagory includes such singers as Tiffany, Debbie Gibson, The Jets and Miami Sound Machine.

Hardcore: psychomatic high-powered music not much unlike the sound of a drowning cat; popular among frustrated youths with virtually no hair, Dock Martin "Big" Boots and fashionably rolled Levi's.

New Wave: poppy danceable music accompanied by synthesizers and electronic sounding noises, much akin to the sound of bottle caps being methodically dropped into the Grand Canyon.

Rap: eccentrically graphic Mother Goose Rhymes lending themselves to odd sputtering and hiccuping noises; frequently associated with gold rope chains, Adidas attire, and dome hats.

Heavy/Speed Metal: this classification of music includes all of those guitar-monger bands that hold a certain reverence for leather pants and long hair. Often associated with rebelliousness and suicide attempts, this music lends itself nicely to a rowdy atmosphere and horror movie sound tracks.

Milestone: Metal mainstream.

Without speculating on the quality among these various music, we must take note that music, like clothing, is a means of personal epression through which we reveal a piece of ourselves. Our musical preferences are indication of who we are as individuals, which is perhaps why it is taken very seriously by many students within S.W.H.S.

Instrumentals

"Okay, we'll take it from the beginning one more time... Trombones again by yourselves from 78... We'll stay here all night until you get it right..." -just a typical day for a typical band member. Yet there are the "un-typical" days for the little more than average band member. Some will get up at 5:30 a.m. so they can be in the band room, warmed up and ready to play by 6:15 a.m., or there are others who, for two days a year, hop a bus and travel to U-Conn to participate in the Eastern Regional Music Festival. A select few wind up pushing themselves through two days worth of adjudications in hopes of being selected for the All-State band.

However you look at it, all band members are extra special people. How many people do you know dress up in heavy, long sleeve polyester in late May, early June and parade around town? Or how many students do you know go to football games, aren't allowed to wear coats and freeze their butts off practically every Saturday in the fall? Most end up chasing loose music across the field during windy half-time displays or rehearsals, but they all admit the dedication pays off.

Master musician in our midst !

Most of the time we hear of great achievements in academics or on the athletic field. This year there is a senior who excels in music. She is ...Jean Pitzi -a master musician in our midst! She has risen from one of many clarinet players to the best high school trombonist on the East coast. She has participated in Eastern, All State, the Greater Hartford Youth Orchestra and the Music Educators National Conference East Coast Festival.

Jean played the clarinet until her freshman year when Mr. Lazzerini asked for volunteers to learn a different instrument. Jean choose the trombone, not an easy instrument to play, and with it has proven her musical talent.

Outing Club

Swoosh! Swish! Splash! Yelp! Aaagh! Typical Outing club sounds from winter ski trips to Spring-time river runs. The activities are endless (and so are the bus rides). The fun never stops!

Don't forget all those bus rides where you were subjected to some sort of subliminal messages over the loud speaker and the games of strip poker in the back of the bus.

Day trips to Pico or Sutton consist of early morning Saturdays and late nights catering to creaking and moaning pains in your body. But believe it or not, there are some people out there who find that exciting and inviting.

Pep Pep... '89

The annual pep rallies have once again come and gone on a flash of maroon and gold. This year's winter and spring pep rallies were the senior events honoring the athletes of South Windsor High School. Not only did the pep rallies show the school's pride in the hard working team members, but they also brought out the healthy competitive spirit of the student body.

Although the pep rallies may not have been as enthusiastically attended as in the past, the spirit of the students who did take part shone through on the colorful posters and the thunderous cheers echoing throughout the entire school.

Southwinds

Hot off the press! Come and get it! Every day during A and B periods the Journalism/Graphics classes met, working to dig up the facts that all thirsty inquiring minds demand. This may appear an easy task but no, no! It is quite difficult deciding which people, groups of people and events will be represented. It is also difficult overcoming the conflicts that arise over biases, opposing viewpoints, and how to approach such a diverse and wide-ranging audience as that which exists here at SWHS. When the pressure is on - which it usually is behind the scenes of a paper of such an active scholastic environment - the overall impression one might get of the Southwinds staff is that of chaos and mayhem, but there is "method in madness" after all. The result of the frantic typing, pasting, cutting and printing that takes place consistently within the walls of the Southwinds headquarters is - usually - a highly organized, informative and entertaining paper full of juicy tidbits and factual copy. Just think - something as everyday as a newspaper could act as a unifying device for the student body. If it were not for the Southwinds, there would be no means of intercommunication for the many different pockets within SWHS. You'll find only truth concerning our growing student nation, and the events that involve one or all.

Homecoming

"Wanna Dance Big Boy?" That captioned quote struck everyones eye as they passed through the main hall outside the main office. The sexy blonde that batted her baby blues from the poster was the masterpiece of seniors Kathleen Tavares and Margie Callan announcing Homecoming '88. These were only two of the many students who slaved to make the third annual event a success.

Jen Terwilliger led the volunteer students in their efforts to make this senior sponsored fall event a success. Choosing a theme was most simple- the main attraction was the football game afterall. Almost magically the gymnasium was transformed into a miniature Meadowlands- a sort of cheerleaders wonderland- and all of this the result of the late evenings efforts on the behalf of the Homecoming crew.

Saturday's game recruited a monstrous attendance despite mother natures muddy mess. It was at this particular game that the "Bobcat Faithful" arose from the depths of the crowd, with their vivacious spirit that the administration sought with such a desperate urge to stifle. (Boring...Boring...)

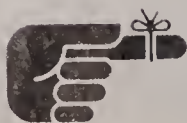

The Homecoming court paraded around the field at half-time cradling roses tenderly between their arms. Later that same day they were recognized once more at the dance in front of a record breaking crowd. While their loyal subjects kneeled before them in worship, the royal court swirled about the floor in a spotlighted dance.

The clock struck eleven and the fairytale had ended, for everyone but the clean-up crew who were ready to embark on a nightmare. After the last streamer was swept free from the floor and the lights turned off, the janitors closed and locked the doors on yet another fantastic senior event.

One of the many posters at the dance, it was a portrayal of an avid fan of the football team.

Death * God * Drood

The lights dim and the roar of the audience is lowered to whispers. You and the other faceless actors stand restlessly off stage, beyond the black curtain, waiting... and waiting. The minutes turn to hours as you listen for your cue. Your eyes are popping out of your head as you realize that you haven't been breathing for the past 5 minutes. The "butterflies" in your stomach are reproducing at an extraordinary rate and nothing would please you more than to run out of the door, never having to face the hundreds of people that paid $3 apiece to see this play! The word "Panic" comes to mind.

This is a common experience for many in the SWHS Drama Club. This isn't even the beginning. First there are auditions, then rehearsal after rehearsal, memorizing whole scripts. At long last, the night of the show, with all faces painted - like "oompa loompas"! This is especially interesting for the guys who haven't had past experiences with the makeup. Why do they do it?

It is the thrilling experience of meeting new people, the challenge of having a new identity, and the excitement of shaping a character for yourself. More than fun and games, fame and fortune, drama is a life in addition to the one you live day to day, and an opportunity to expose your many faces.

Literary Magazine

On its way from the submissions box to the pages of the South Windsor High School Literary Magazine, a student's short story, poem photograph or art must pass intense review by the student staff of "In My Mind's Eye". In weekly meetings members debate and vote for acceptance or rejection of various submissions, and work on completing the layout for the final product due at the end of the year.

The South Windsor Ambassador Team is a newly founded organization at SWHS with a purpose to help new students to adjust to their new environment. It was started the middle of the 87-88 year and has helped several transfer students to know there is a friendly face for them.

SWAT has hosted a breakfast and a Christmas party to encourage the buddy system. Ms. Folta commented that although there hasn't been any community work yet, there are plans to carry the friendly group outside of the school walls.

Student Council

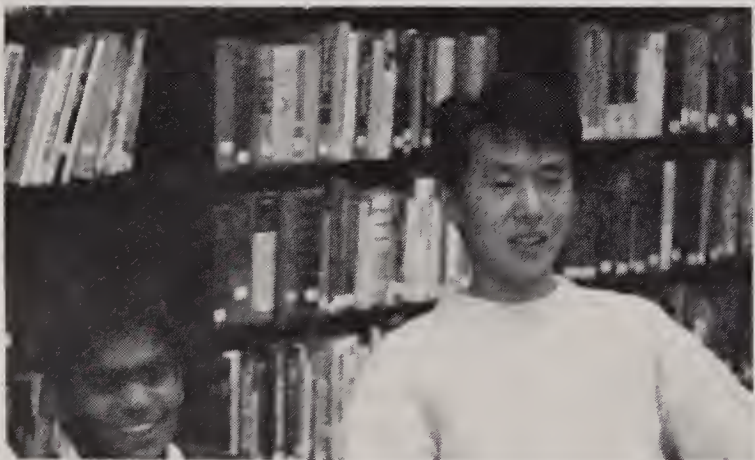

This year, the Student Council has been striving for school spirit here at SWHS. Their main goal was trying to gain more school involvement among the students. By organizing events such as the Homecoming Court, the Food Drive, the Foreign Exchange students receptions, the Blood Drive, and the Spring Semi-formal, the Student Council gained the student interest it hoped for.

By setting a firm foundation, the Student Council attempted to set a tradition for itself. They participated actively in several functions outside of school. Statewide conventions and even an exchange with Windsor High Student Council are examples of how the SWHS Student Council is taking action to obtain high energy and spirit among the students.

Achieving a tradition of success will be a great task, but hopefully the basis of a strong Student Council can be formed so that in future years it can become one of our stronger student organizations.

Council members look on as our Holland exchange Barbara van der Meulen cuts the cake.

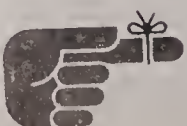

Ken Morihisa and a friend enjoy themselves at the reception.

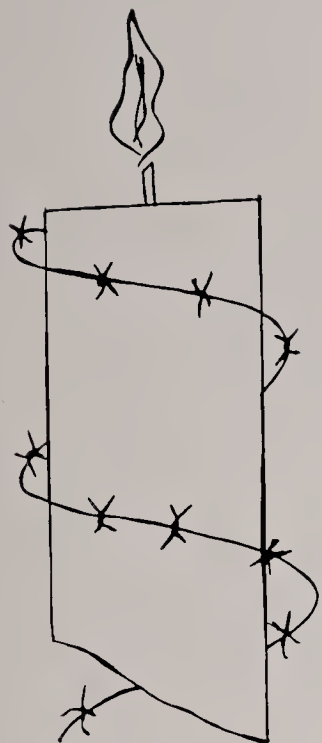

Looks like presidential duties aren't so difficult after all.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL:
Human Rights Now

Amnesty International

Peacemongers? Raving picketers? Maybe, but the majority of the fifty members in the newly formed, controversial chapter of Amnesty International in this school are no more than concerned students and teachers. Concerned with what? Human rights, liberty, and the welfare of people imprisoned because of their political, religious, or ethnic beliefs.

This year, AI has sponsored guest speakers, Dr. Wu and Leslie Liddle. This year has been full of news of Amnesty in the music world. The Human Rights Now! tour, for instance, is making headlines with top-billed musicians like Sting, U2, and Tracy Chapman. Members of Amnesty have sought the support of fellow classmates for petitions, many of whom unfortunately refuse to sign lest they be kidnapped by preying Commies or something. On December 10, the anniversary of the Declaration of Human Rights, SW's group met with other chapters from local schools, and marched the streets of West Hartford - an event significant enough to make a 10 second slot on the six o'clock news. Fundraisers of the usual candy sorts were conducted. Amnesty International will continue its crusades for hope.

Centurion

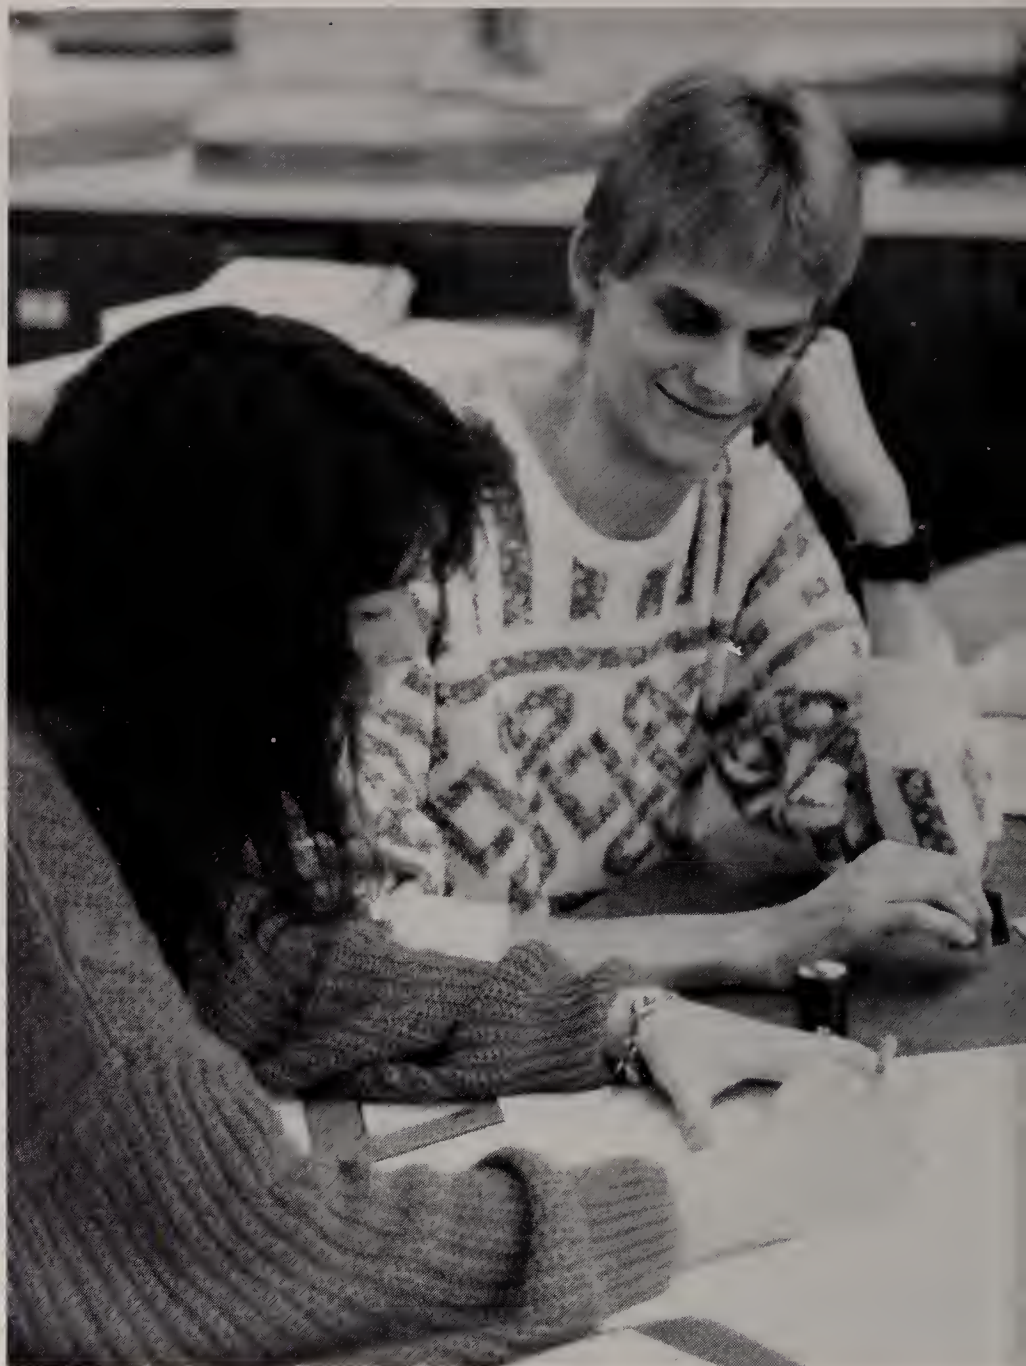

A... articles, artwork. B... books, business, budget, Bryant. C... copy, cropping, candid. D... design, deadlines, due dates. E... everything missing, evenings of work, effort. F... finished on time, final deadline, found-lost photos.

These are some of the abc's of making the Centurion the quality book that it is. This year we have gone to a 9 X 12 book. This is a step in making our yearbook one of the finest around.

Editor in Chief JJ Brown, lead a dedicated staff of editors, copywriters, designers and layout people to get the book done on time. Seniors Margie Callan, Janine Bowman, Teri Lanza, Laura Creagan, Jenifer Lee and Tony Shum spent many long afternoons writing and editing copy.

The business end of the yearbook was supported with fine work by Mike Helbig and Carol DeSouza. Underclassmen Mike Kaufman and Mike Lahickey put in much time doing some of the 'grunt' work of identifying photos and copying layout sheets.

The ideas for this years' book got their start at the three day yearbook workshop that was held in July at Bryant College. JJ Brown, Teri Lanza, Margie Callan and Advisor, Mr. Nelson spent the 6th, 7th, and 8th, of July working on themes, layouts, graphic elements, listening to speakers and attending workshop sessions.

What a staff! The summer meeting was the only one to have a turnout greater than six!!!

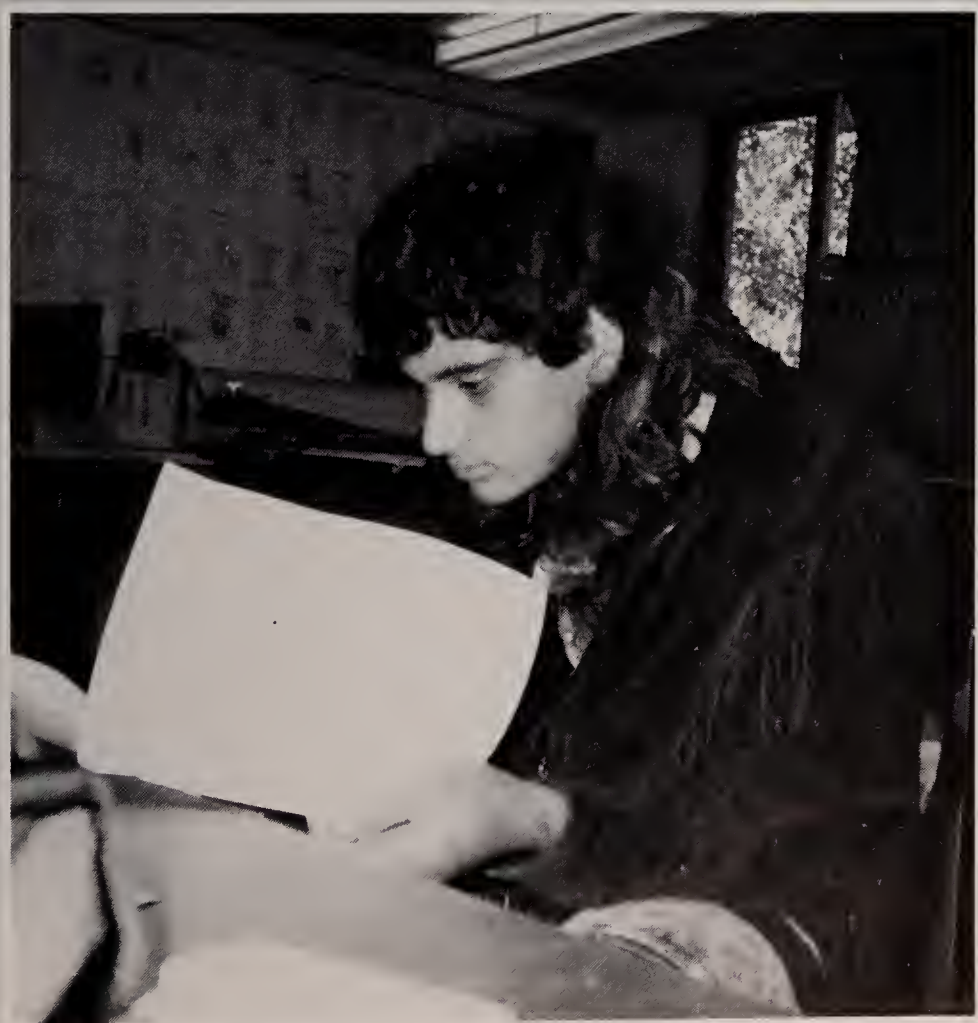

Tom Swanson, Tony Shum, Christian Carlson, Teri Lanza, Margie Callan, Janine Bowman, JJ Brown, Jen Lee, Hilary Dunbar, Stefanie Raffa

Jen Lee, hoping that the next deadline is weeks away, ponders what else might be written.

"I see a mistake in this line!" Santosh Bapat quickly scans a paper for mistakes.

A layout editor's thoughts: pages and pages and pages, when will we ever be done with them???

CENTURION

C period's A.P. English class does a modern version of "King Lear", as gang members from the Bronx.

Marcy Toomey and Tim Evans look on as fellow schoolmates whirl around, at a school dance.

Teri Lanza and Jen Lee vege to some heavy music and insence in their English class.

Life at SWHS

Enjoying a ski weekend, Mike Taylor breezes his way through the non-existent lift lines.

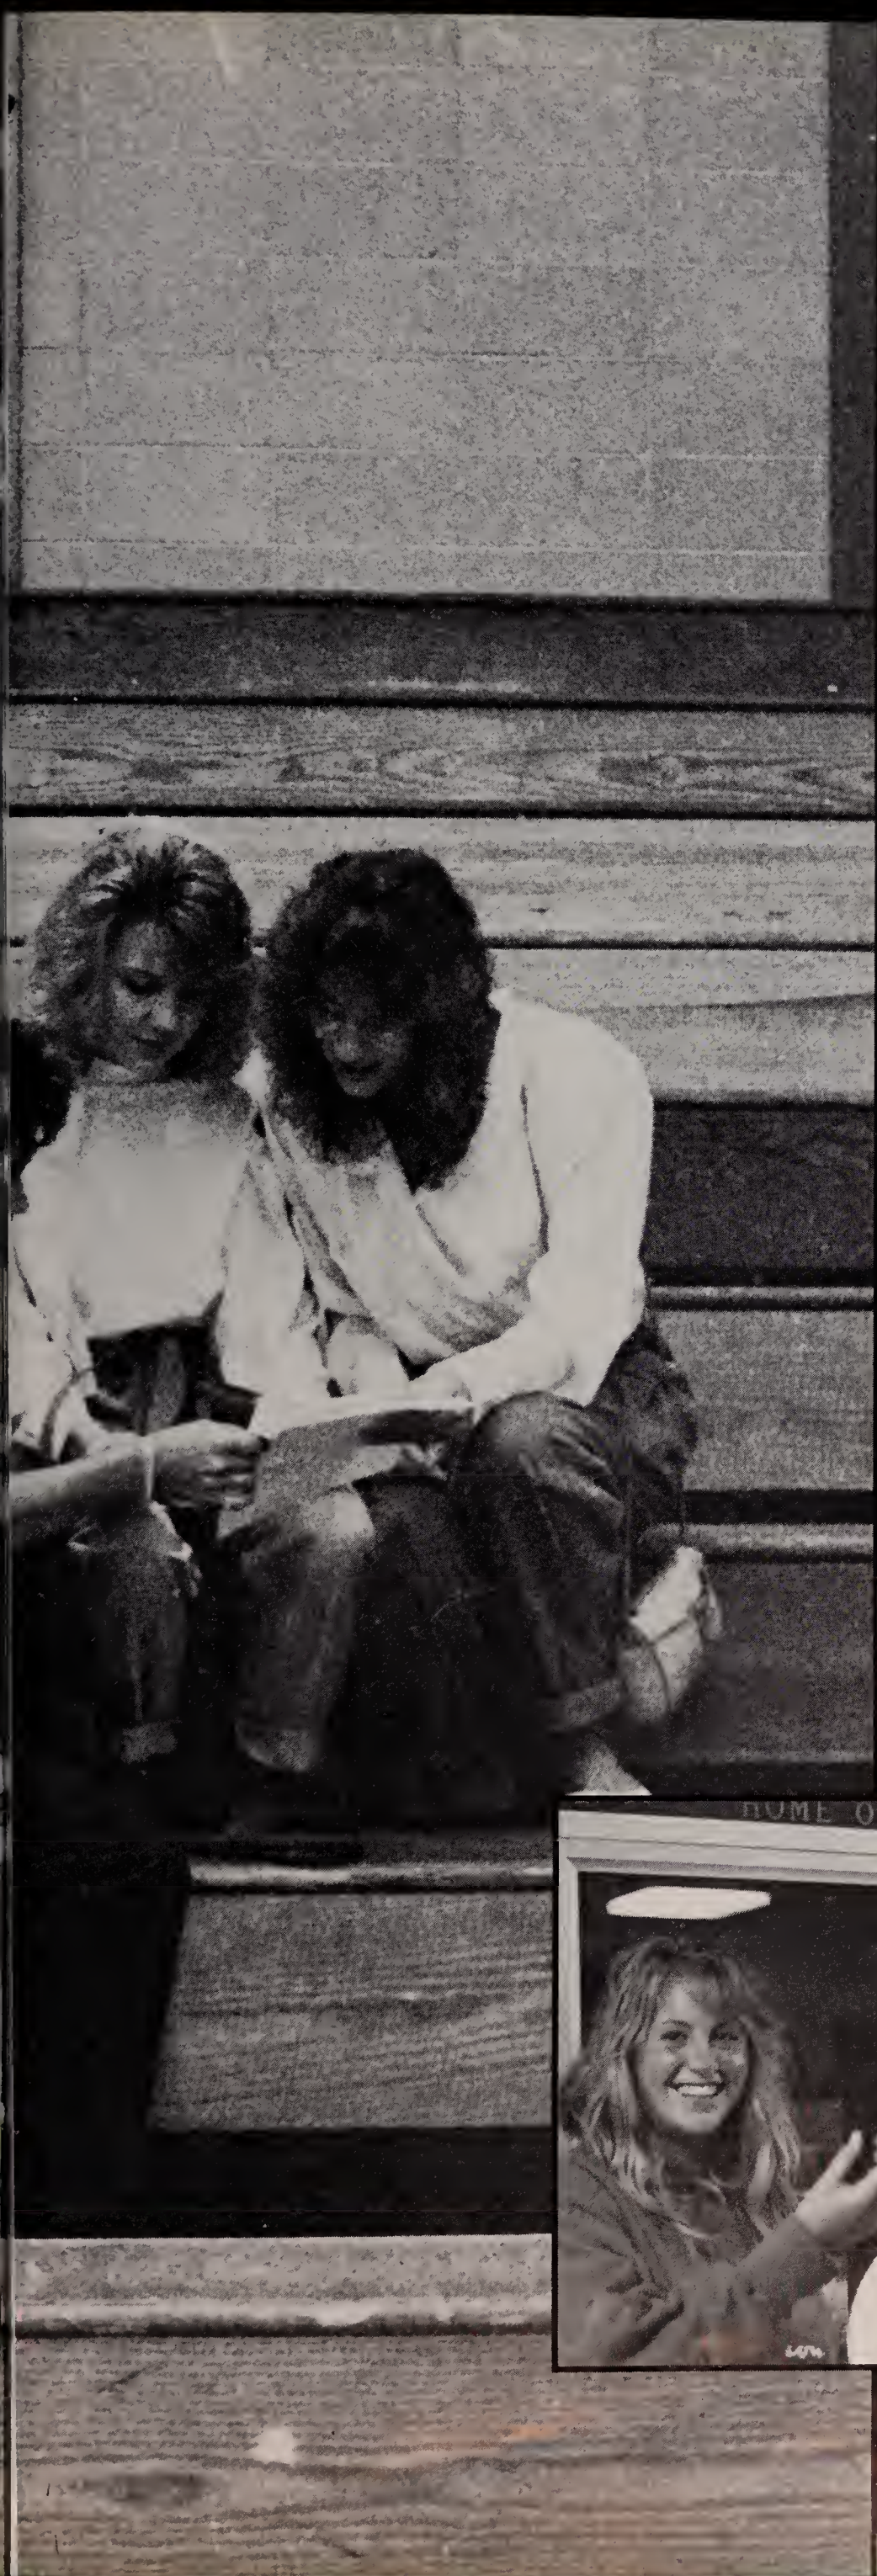

"Hummm, that was good, but I still think my piece is better," Maura Fitzgerald said wistfully.

Senior Alison Shortt glances up from her busy work filing index cards in envelopes.

Seniors

Seniors at last!

We are the class of '89. We have been here for four years and many of us never thought we would make it. The real world is calling. Work, careers, colleges are out there waiting. We are going to miss the safety and sanctuary of this school. For some of us, the completion of school is just a new beginning.

We cannot forget the best season ever for the football team, the state tournament teams in field hockey and soccer, our great ice hockey team, musical events, plays, trips and activities in which we spent our free time. Many friendships that started here will carry on for life. Many things learned here will carry us through life's rough times and many skills we have gained will help us in whatever field we choose to enter.

We are the class of '89.

Nova Scotia

The class of '89 has always done things in a big way... Their class trip was a venture that fell in suit. No, they did not go forth into the carnivalistic world of Riverside or Lake Compounce, they preferred to travel abroad--to the misty isle of Nova Scotia. Their quest consisted of a fun-filled afternoon of frolicking along the boardwalk at Hampton Beach, a long and delirious bus ride, and at long last, a 24-hour escapade into the realm of gambling, sea sickness, entertainment, and rebelliousness.

Are Tanya Wingfield and

As vice-president sophomore year and president junior and senior years, Todj Gozdeck has definitely given leadership to our class. He has provided guidance for organizing activities, encouraged enthusiasm during the pep rallies and don't forget the morning announcements. All that certainly deserves our gratitude.

Halfway up the ladder of success, Chris Hatala looks like she's already midway to her goal in life, whatever that may be. Chris not only has a head start on life, but she was considered to be one of the more chic members of our class. This will most certainly help her rising aims.

Mag Drive

The Class of '89 filed into the auditorium the first day of school. They were greeted by a sales representative from the magazine company asking them to go out and sell! sell! sell!

Class dues were $150 this year, and magazine sales were a way to cut the cost or even pay all expenses for the Senior year. Selling $360 worth of magazines would guarantee the cost of the outing, the reception, graduation, and a choice of the yearbook, reception guest or Senior video.

This year's Seniors displayed great enthusiasm and an average of $53,000 worth of magazines were sold. Some special Seniors like Katie Plummer, Elyssa Clymer, and Heather Cayward went above and beyond their call, contributing more than the average participant to the spirit of the Class of '89.

Frenchies

In October of this past school year, we experienced a ten-day visit with French foreign exchange students. Co-ordinated by Mrs. McKenna and Ms. Cloutier, the exchange was an amusing and educational mix of cultures. During their stay, the French students were exposed to a number of American traditions and highlights: Halloween, Boston, Hartford, and Sturbridge Village. Although many of these things may have seemed bizarre to our European visitors, they could openly appreciate the "Better Homes and Gardens" Suburbia of SW which came as a culture shock in comparison to their city living. Their week spent here became a rewarding and considerably less-than-boring endeavor for the French and American alike.

Mr. Plunkett gives Madame Marchand, the visiting French students' advisor, a gift at the reception.

"Dit fromage!" or rather, "Say cheese!" Tom Costa stands with two of the French visitors.

South Africa

This year a great concern for human rights was displayed by the student body. Out of this concern was the sponsoring of speaker Leslie Liddle, who spoke to interested South Windsor students about her experience in South Africa, where she had been held as a political prisoner for many months. The presentation provoked a great deal of response - feelings of anger, astonishment, and compassion from many gave rise to an overall awareness of just how lucky we are to have our freedoms and of the work needed to help others to enjoy the same kind of freedom throughout the world.

Political prisoner Leslie Liddle speaks to concerned students about Apartheid in South Africa.

Creativity flows through the fingertips of Ted Danigelis, voted the most creative Senior. What will Ted do in the future with this title? Will he become an advertiser in NYC and brain wash our minds with little drawings that carry nasty messages when looked at backwards, or will he just settle making a million dollars selling his work in a gallery, or just draw to amuse himself?

We all have to agree that this year's most unique Senior is Kim Doolittle-how many other people do you know wear a skirt made entirely out of safety-pins? Where will Kim go from here? Will she remain, as the dictionary says, without a like or equal, or will the pressures of society's conformity over ride her? The world may never know.

Santosh Bapat narrowly won the contest for Class Mystery while at the same time, taking Class Sleeper. Many of us have often wondered as to his whereabouts during the day, but that question is easily answered if one were to take a stroll down to Graphics. Maybe he overworks himself down there and finds his salvation snoozing through other classes? We can only guess...

Casualness comes easily to this particularly laid back individual. This student just happens to be Steve Stroud. From his life at home to the life at school to the life at work, he takes one project at a time, always "stopping to smell the roses." But will this carry over into his continuing career? If so, maybe one day we can see him as.... our Vice President???

NHS

November 10, 1988, 22 students selected for their character and academic excellence were inducted into the Wood Chapter of the National Honor Society. The formal evening ceremony was attended by faculty, parents, and friends, and included speeches by Mr. Plunkett and superintendent Dr. Wood, and a performance by the Woodwind Ensemble. A brief history of NHS was given by Christina Hatala, and candles representing knowledge, scholarship, leadership, and service were lit by inductees as interpretations of these values were given. Official membership cards and pins were presented by NHS advisors Mrs. Czerbinski and Ms. Laurain to the solemn, berobed students, they recited the NHS pledge in unison no less. The induction was followed by a reception.

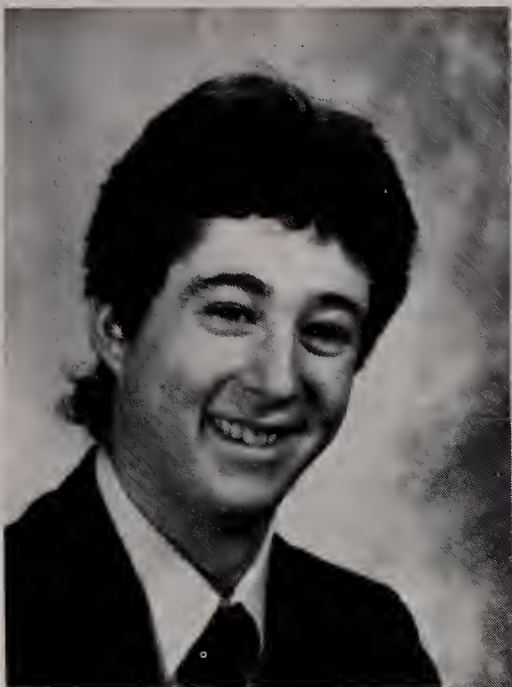

Sabrina Smith, Heather Cayward, and Ann Marie Lohmann grin, happy that the ceremony is over.

Jennifer Lee, secretary, lights the Candle of Knowledge in a glowing euphoria.

During the course of the year, Seniors in the Child Development classes provided parents of the community with a valuable service, yet, this is nothing compared to what they gave children in their own care. The classes that took place during C, D, and E periods provided the ten 2-, 3- and 4-year-olds enrolled at the Learning Center with more than just "Circle Time" and "Snack Time," but also a sense of serenity and self worth that comes with quality time together.

Tiny tots

They did not only learn to recite the alphabet and count numbers, they were encouraged to explore their imaginations, to interact with others in a positive way. The intermingling of these two vastly different age groups, teens and tots, provided all involved parties with an unforgettable and valuable learning experience. The two came together to gain from one another the values and experiences that will guide them throughout life.

The class diligently makes plans for the incoming youngsters.

Three kids get ready to slide into the new school year.

Junior Prom

It's Prom Night, May 6, 1988, and you're looking across the dance floor at the Class of '89 bedecked, in satin gowns and pin-striped tuxedos. The night air is warm, and though it drizzles a bit outside, nothing can rain on the magic of the dimmed lights, the music, and the silken flowers. Held at the Conference Center in Windsor Locks, last year's Junior Prom was an evening given to friends, fun, and frolic; it was an evening to laugh, and an evening to add to the past that will one day be looked back on as precious. Junior Prom '88 created special memories that this year's Seniors will cherish forever as a flower pressed between printed pages, a wrinkled dress, and photographs of "The Best of Times."

Bat those eyes, baby. They lavish themselves in attention, they adore the smiles and sideways glances; the master of charming laughter and hallway affection, the flirt is a key element in any class. This is by no means a degrading title—wiles are an art. Those for whom flirtaciousness works will never be helpless in life. Charm and flattery will get you everywhere.

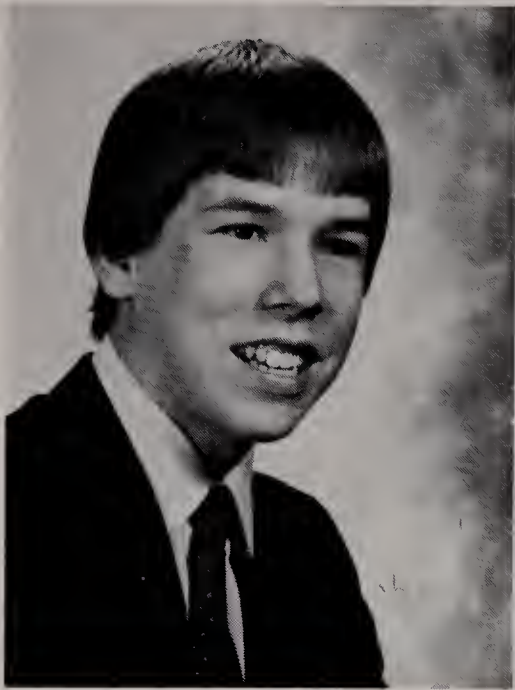

Versatility—this is an advantage for those who possess it. From sports to music, the doors of endless opportunities open to those who are able to change, to explore, and excel.

Imagine that ever-so-popular crowded room, and that glance over clouds of smoke, tables of bean-dip and fruit punch. What is it that causes that magnetism? Is it some sort of primitive mating call? The right shade of lipstick? The perfect colonge? What it boils down to is an undefinable appeal. Some of us have it, and others... oh, well.

They say, "The eyes are the window to the soul."

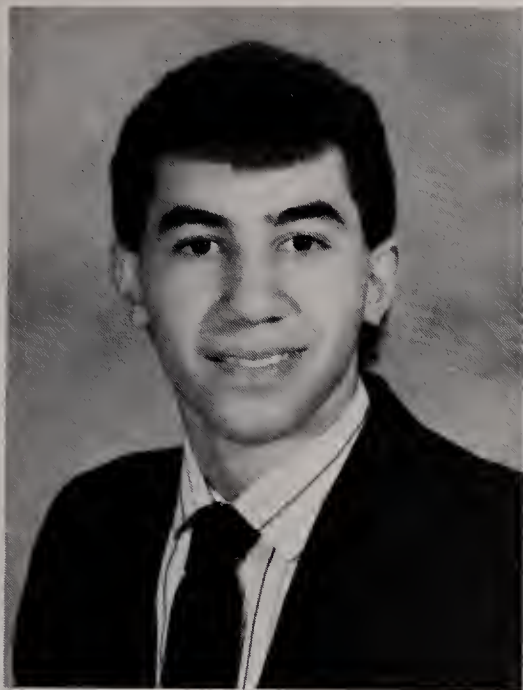

Adam Hathorn flashes us that winning Colgate smile.

Will Rice It's you! No, not the shirt you're wearing- your personality. It's what people see, it's what they don't see. It follows you everywhere and can not be shaken. Some people are fortunate enough to have an appealing one. Charisma, humor, kindness, understanding, openness- all of these things are trademarks of a "good" personality, the trick is to find them in one another.

* Underclassmen

Freshmen who were at the top last year now find themselves at the bottom. Sophomores aren't on the bottom anymore, but find themselves in a kind of no-man's land. Juniors can see the light at the end of the tunnel but realize there's one more year to go. You've got your formal class events and occurrences —but what about other class rites? Junior year and having parking lot privileges, and don't forget the chaos and mahem of aimlessly wandering freshmen on the first day of school. And about those upper that they know actually just as What about the terflies that slamstomach the morning of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the decision of whom to ask to the prom and then saving enough money for the limo, dinner, flowers and that extra special tux or shopping for prom gowns. It's not only the "Big Events" that create the best memories of high school years. You can't forget the real-life stuff that goes on in between.

A Laugh A Day Keeps the Blues Away

Ha! That is such a riot! It's just a riot, okay? You can not deny it or avoid it- laughter just happens. Why is there a whole section of this page devoted to just laughing? BECAUSE! Everyone on this page is smiling aren't they? Besides, it is one of those things no one bothers to discuss. It just IS. So why not acknowledge the fact that laughing is something we do everyday, something that (to the frustration of many faculty members) is uncontrollable, yet undeniably a large part of high school life. Everybody bust a gut!

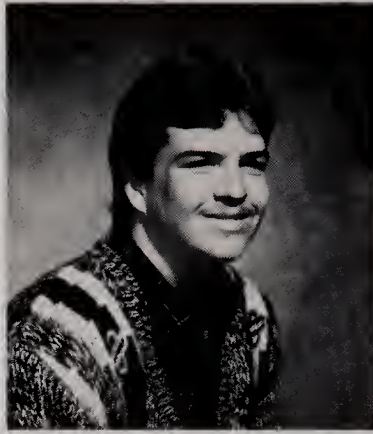

Could it be said that Larry Cowles tickles Jill Miles fancy?

You are so silly! Why is it that when anyone thinks of pictures, they think of sitting on a stool, their body twisted into odd positions, with a constipated look on their face, listening to a man gurgle "okay, say PEACHES!". That is not what life is about, and neither is formality. It seems that the memories that we hold most dear are those that make us A: embarrassed or B: those that can not be thought about without a smile bursting forth. So forget about the melodramatic serious pose- take a look at what you're really like.

Kim Rogoz and Debbie Sullivan take time to chat. Is that her normal expression or just for the camera?

Smiling Sophomores

The Sophomore Predicament

As sophomores, you are now wise to the means of surviving the trials and tribulations of high school. How often now do you speculate on a heavily book burdened individual tripping on his shoelaces in the hallway and think "Freshman"? How often do you laugh in the face of danger as your study hall teacher warns you to be silent "or else"? As sophomores, you have completed your series of initiative rites: severe ridicule from Seniors, sitting in the front of the bus, the Frightening First Day of high school, of midterms, of finals...So you have passed your "awkward stage", but are you omniscient yet? Sophomorphism is without question an improvement on the freshman predicament, but it has yet to match the power of Upperclassmen Dominance.

Sophomore Memoires: lunacy in the lunch room, high school dances, after-school sports practice, all of the things that may not strike you as particularly memorable now, but will in the years to come. Sophomore year is when we begin to define who we really are, and who we would like to become. Things that may seem only a tedious routine are a large part of this exploration. We learn from day to day more about our interests, our habits, our pet peeves and our preferences; these discoveries are what determine us as friends, as students, and as individuals.

Special needs students and able bodied seniors all need some of this special support. From being helped in and out of a wheel chair to getting your college application correctly processed are just some of the ways extra help is

The secretaries in the guidance offices, main office and library who check you into school when you are late or find that special book for that over due term paper; the custodians who keep the school clean and picked up; the cafeteria ladies who cook and serve lunch; and the people who help out in Special Education classes are all greatly appreciated for that special 'extra' help that they give so freely.

Sports

Don't forget sports! How could anyone here at the high school, or in town for that matter, forget this year in sports at SWHS? The outstanding performance of the football and ice hockey teams, the state tournament bids for the field hockey, girls' and boys' soccer and volleyball teams.

Sports at SWHS involves more students than any other activity. Dedicated athletes spend many hours before and after school getting in shape, working out, and practicing. They endure the yelling and screaming of their coaches who are trying to get the athlete to be the best that he or she can be. They endure the long bus rides to and from games, the thrills of winning and the heartbreak of playing their best but losing.

We also can not and should not forget the involvement of students as fans. Those students, who perhaps lack athletic ability, still share the spirit that our athletes have by going to the games and cheering for their favorite Bobcat team.

Varsity Football

The Bobcats enjoyed their best season ever by going 10-1 and were the undefeated CCC East champions. The only loss was suffered in the Class MM State Championship game to Bristol Eastern. Otherwise the Bobcats would have had their first perfect season ever.

The team featured 11 all-conference players: Chris Beganski, Tom Kucinskas, Brian Simkewicz, Eric Perry, Brian Symonds, Nick Georgeadis, Pat Callahan, Tony "Mad Dog"

Bogoslofski, and Chris Spelman. Other players who played a major part in the team's success were Brad Symonds and Delon Hunt.

South was primed for a spectacular season with a team that featured mostly senior leadership. Almost every opponent was crushed by the mighty Bobcat machine. The 50 point mark was reached twice as the team averaged 32 points per game.

Overall, it took a team effort to achieve what they did and to bring out the best in the younger players. It is likely to see continued success next year.

The Bobcats destroyed Hartford Public 53-6 in the Homecoming game. The revenge match against East Hartford ended in a 22-12 Bobcat victory. East Hartford had won in SW last year by a score of 34-14. The other 50 point game was against Windham, 50-14. The only shutout of the year was in a 35-0 trounce against Enfield.

Ever So Close

Class MM Title Slips Away

A Loss For The Bobcats

"It was an unfortunate way to end our season, but we had a great season (10-0 in the regular season and #1 in the state coaches' poll) and have nothing to be ashamed of. We went further than any other team in South Windsor's history." These sentiments, expressed by co-captain Dennis Moynihan, are shared by many of this year's players.

It is unfortunate how one incident can tarnish eleven months of hard work. This year's football team was the greatest team that this town has ever seen. They gave students something to take pride in. Their achievements are a rarity in SW athletics. No longer were the football games a place to meet friends and make plans for the weekend. Instead, people came to see the team play and if friends were there, all the better.

Students and parents alike began to flock to the games, both home and away to cheer on the team and "get a little bit rowdy."

At the Manchester game, SW fans doubled Manchesters, including their huge band.

The team was defeated in the State Tournament game, but this should not be dwelled upon. The town should take pride in what was accomplished rather than reliving a disheartening loss to Bristol Eastern.

The Bobcat Faithful

Ready For Action

"Get on the bus! Bodybag!" If you went to a Bobcat football game, these are a few phrases you might hear from the Bobcat Faithful. These students stood behind the team 100%.

Some of the football players enjoy having the fans at each game. Offensive tackle Rich Bonanano said "the fans intimidate the opposition. They dare the opponents to play our team." Outside linebacker Lew Irvin feels "the fans are the best thing that has happened to the school. They pump up the team." Noseguard Jeff Streeter thinks "they (fans) do a good job keeping the team up for a game."

Sabrina Smith and Katie Callahan are prepared to decorate the cars of their favorite athletes.

The fans enjoy cheering the team on and mocking the opposition. Senior Todj Gozdeck felt "we were the best fans in the state. Our cheering made the game fun and we beat the opposition before our team did. We gave mental punishment while the team gave physical punishment."

The Bobcat faithful cheer enthusiastically after a touchdown.

The tenacious Bobcat defense was the main reason for the teams success. Shown here are Jim Ingalls and Tony "Mad Dog" Bogoslofski.

Team Makes States Field Hockey

The field hockey team had an excellent season finishing 13-3-3 overall. The season ended in the second round of the state tournament against Pomperaug on a cold November day.

The team did produce three all conference players, Kate Schaffner, Dot Potyra, and Lori Driscoll and two second team all-state players, Kate Schaffner and Dot Potyra. Co-captains, Lora Klute and Tara Saylor, lead the team with their playing ability and team spirit. Lori Driscoll led the team in scoring. The Bobcat's combined a strong defense with a relentless offense that catapulted them to second in the CCC East -only half a game out of first place. Even though 9 seniors will be graduating, the next few years should produce many good teams as in the past. The JV ended their season with a 9-2-2 record and promises to be a force in the CCC next year.

Boys' Soccer

Team Makes States

It was a successful year for the boys' soccer team, directed by Coach Longo, who took over the reins from Coach Sharos and did a great job in his first year as Varsity Coach. Finishing with an 8-8-2 record, the team made the State Tournament.

With a nucleus of nine seniors, Coach Longo had the basis for a strong team. Although the team started out slowly, they performed well midseason and played a strong Lyman Hall team in the State Tournament, finally losing 4-3 in overtime.

There is a strong J.V. team coming up and Bobcat soccer shall keep on their winning ways.

Girls make States

Girls' Soccer

The Girls' Varsity Soccer Team was filled with promise as the '88 season began. The team was one of the strongest that had been seen in the history of girls' soccer at S.W.H.S. The team was equipped with a relentless defense, the mainstay of that defense was Ellen Clegg who played at the sweeperback position. When all else failed, Ellen was there time and time again. The team also had a swift offense which was led by All State senior Andrea Nowak. South had 2 All-Conference players, Sophomore Bethany Bishop and Tanya Wingfield. South made it to the State Tournament with a record of 8-7-1 but was defeated by New Canaan 4-0 in the first round.

Volleyball

Is volleyball getting bigger and better at SWHS? You bet!

Under the direction of Coach Joy and Coach Cloutier, the team played well throughout the season and made the state tournament. In the tournament, they played hard, but were eliminated by Bunnell in the first round.

The team started off strong, winning their first three games, but then lost five in a row. The team showed its spunk by coming back and going undefeated in their next six games, finishing strong by defeating Ellington and Rockville in the last two games of the season.

The J.V. squad, under the tutelage of Coach Cloutier was very tough, finishing with a fifteen and

CHASA-Girls' Track & Field Coach Of The Year

Coaching for 14 years, spending 3 1/2 hours a day during the season and pushing his team hard has earned Coach Stoklosa the Connecticut High School Coaches Association's girls' track and field Coach of the Year.

Coach Stoklosa loves the sport and participated in track while in college doing running events and the long jump. His last year's track and field team finished second overall in Class L competition and this year's team should do as well.

Cross Country

The Boys' and Girls' Cross Country teams experienced successful seasons. The boys' team posted a record of 12-2 in dual meets and third in the class MM meet. The girls were 8-6 in dual meets.

Boys'

The Boys' Cross Country team had one of their most successful seasons ever. They were competitive for the class L state title all the way to the end. The team ended with a strong fourth place finish at the state meet, ranked several times in the state CC poll, and ranked eight in the state at the end of the year.

The boys' team was led through the year with the leadership of co-captains Stephen Stroud and Patrick

O'Neill. Stephen and Jeff Willard were All-Conference runners. Patrick O'Neill was also All-Conference and All-State. He went on to represent SW in the New England Championships and finished 45 out of 250 of New England's best runners. The school Cross Country record was also broken by Pat with a time of 14:10.

Girls

Although this year's girls' Cross Country team, led by Coach Stoklosa, consisted mostly of freshmen it was by no means a weak team. The three freshmen, Laura Salcius, Shari Engman, and Karlyn Banda, formed a solid base that gave the team a competitive edge. This trio, plus veteran runners Linda Baron (soph.), Kristie Cella (jr.), and captain Heather Cayward (sr.), were a hardworking determined bunch. They kept the traditional SWHS spirit alive even though the team was plagued by injuries throughout the entire season. Regardless of these setbacks, the team still managed to have a terrific season and never without a laugh or a smile.

Boys' Basketball

After finishing with only one win, most people would have believed that the basketball Bobcats lacked talent and drive. That was definitely not the case. These hoopsters worked hard and practiced diligently. Most of the team losses were within 10 points which showed how hard the team worked against their much taller opponents.

Brad Bishop stated,

"Most of our opponents starting teams are all bigger than our whole team." Mike Raimondo felt, "that if the team could have gotten a win in the middle of the season we could have gotten a few more wins."

Both the J. V. and Freshman teams had more successful seasons and show a lot of promise for the coming years.

Girls' Basketball

The girls' basketball team finished 5-15 overall and 2-12 in the CCC East. It was a difficult and long season. Because there were only nine girls on the team there was no J.V. team. The teams record does not reflect in any way the spirit, skill, and enthusiasm of the team. The bobcats were directed on the floor by leading scorer and co-captain Kathy Peasley, and by the great overall playing of the other Co-captain, Tara Saylor. The team didn't have the height of other teams but were never intimidated by their larger opponents. The most memorable moment that the team won't forget was Coach Rusch's 200 career win, at South Windsor, which came against Bloomfield.

Senior Samantha Neary did some impressive work for the gymnastic team, again. She made All-Conference and All-State. She began gymnastics at the age of nine in the SW Rec Department, and private lessons followed. But when she hit high school, she competed with the

17-3 CCC East Champs Ice Hockey

The quest for a state high school championship in hockey started in November with the first 5:45 a.m. practice and continued another three months. Practicing this early in the morning was difficult for some but you can only practice when ice time is available. Getting up this early shows the determination and dedication of this year's hockey team.

The team was led by

Coach Dunn and Coach Downey, both new to South Windsor hockey. Captian D. J. LeBlanc and assistant captians Daryl Vallez, Brendon Leonard and Bill Tellier provided the leadership on the ice that was necessary to get the CCC East championship, a 17-3 record and a birth in the state playoffs.

The line of D.J. LeBlanc, Brendon Leonard and Gabe Hathorn led the team in points with D.J. breaking the school scoring record held by hockey standout Brian Sullivan.

The teams only competition came from Fairfield Prep, the states number one team, and Simsbury.

The team ended up tied for third with New Canaan in the state coaches poll.

One reason for the team's success was the play by goalies Rusty Williams, Adam Hathorn and Jason Esten.

Indoor Track

In the winter months, if you came to school before 7:00 o'clock, you probably ran into the indoor track team (literally). These dedicated runners run in the halls from 6:40 until 7:00 o'clock, this is the way they trained to get and stay in shape.

Indoor track is an individualized sport, with each athlete training for their own event. The field events, consisting of shotput, pole vault, long jump, and high jump, had a few, but well qualified, participants. The rest of the team participated in the track events such as sprints, distance runs, high hurdles and various relays.

Pat Decker has been putting the shot and throwing the discus for six years. He started in seventh grade. Last year Pat won the state class L discus championship with a throw of 148 feet. In the state open meet Pat placed eleventh out of a field of twenty with a throw of only 136 feet. Pat said, "It was not my best effort, I was not comfortable with the throwing circle."

This season, Pat

concentrated on getting in shape and improving his shotputting abilities.

Artistic Endeavors

Each year, Northeast Sign Painting Company buys a page in the ad section to show off the artistic abilities of SWHS students. Shown on this divider page are sculptures from Mrs. Kinsloe-Byers class. Photographs from Mr. Nelson's advanced photography class and line drawings and etchings from Miss Maillet's drawing class are highlighted on page 168.

Advertisements

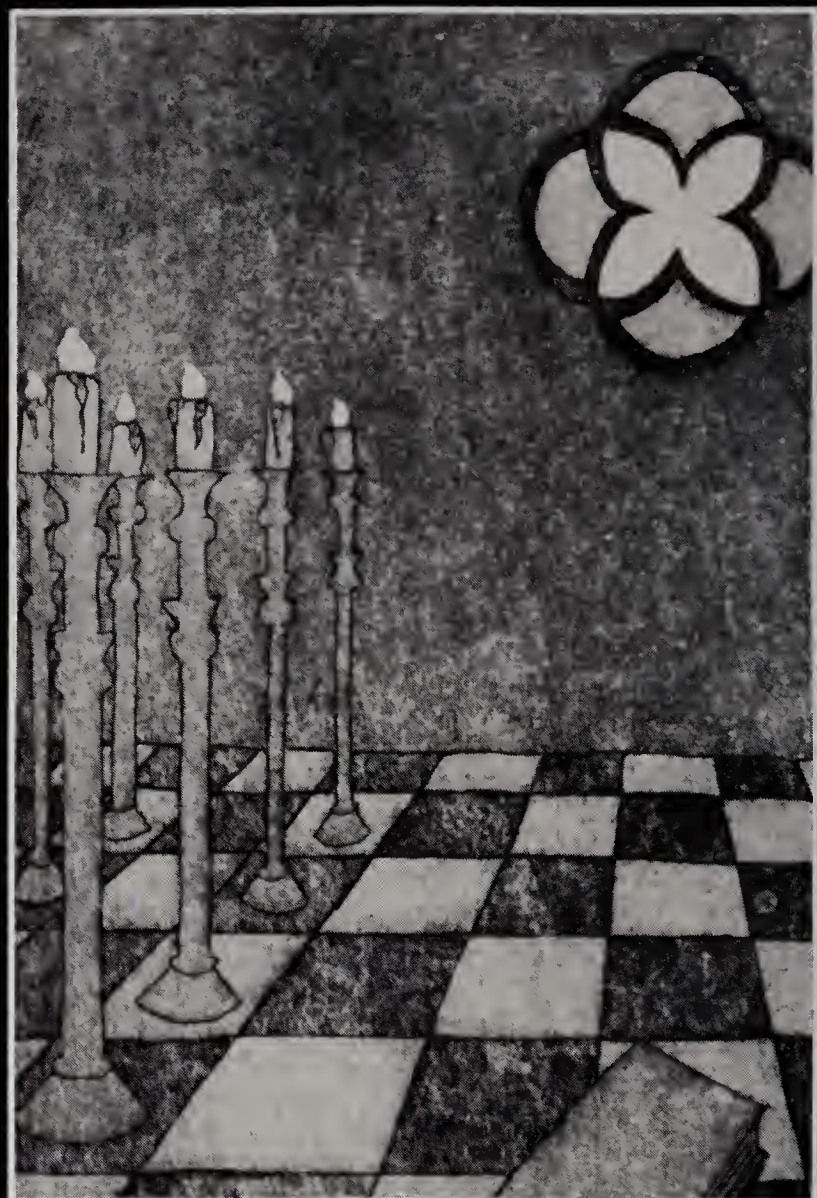

Putting out a quality yearbook takes time, effort, desire, talent and a lot of money. The selling of advertisement space helps to raise about four thousand dollars. This helps to defray the cost of the yearbook to the students. Without this help the yearbook cost would go up about six dollars for each book.

It is hoped that each student will look at these ads and congratulatory messages and patronize the businesses and professionals who support this school.

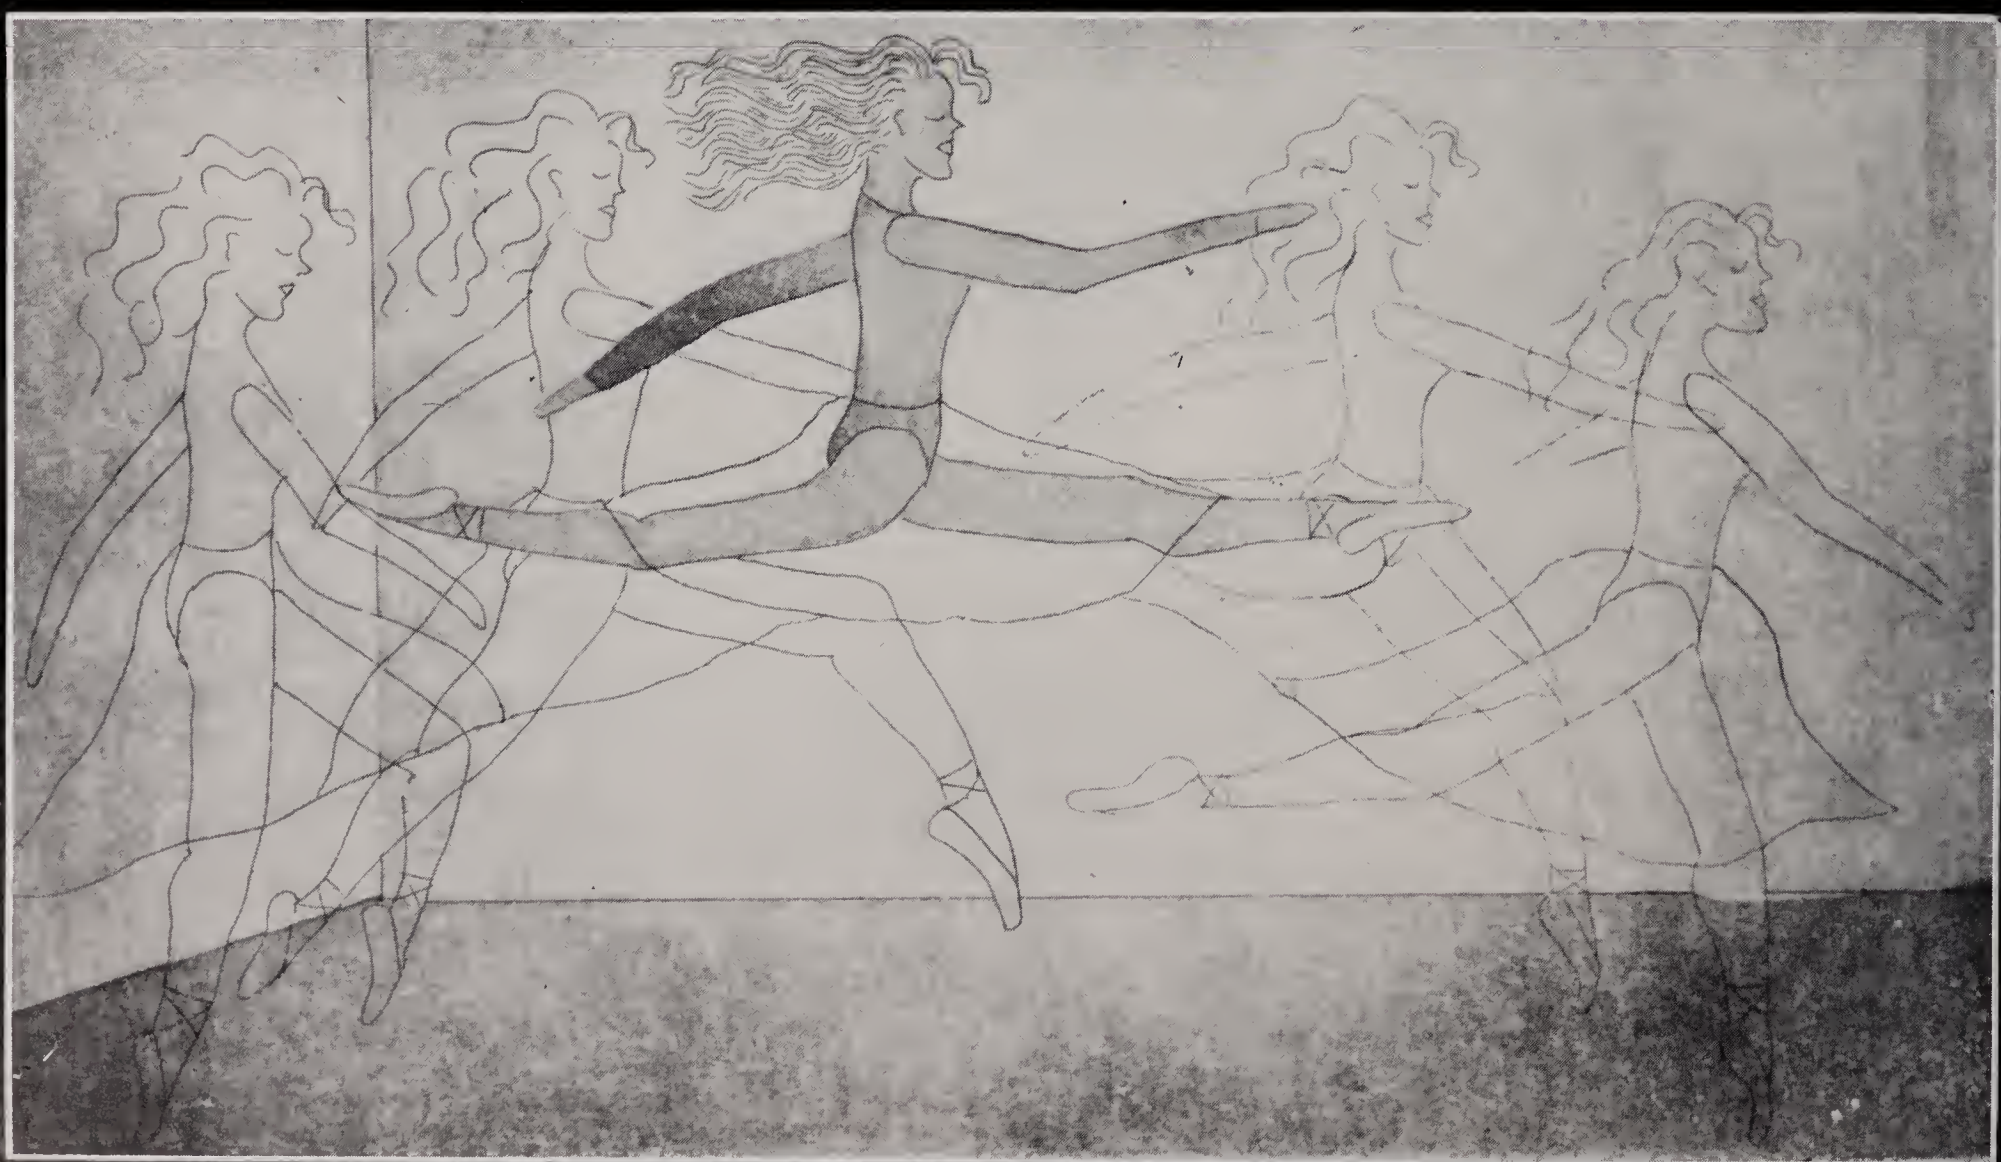

Last summer the yearbook staff started selling ads in July. Each business in town was sent a letter and ad form. By the time school started in September, most of the ad space was already sold.

Some advertisers like Northeast Sign, Dairy Queen, Mitchell Fuel Oil, and South Windsor Pharmacy have been continuous sponsors for many years and we appreciate their support.

*Why, who makes much of miracles?
As to us, we know of nothing else but
miracles,
Whether we walk the halls of the High School
Or dart our eyes at ceilings and the sky
Or wade with naked feet along the water's edge
Or stand in small gatherings of friends
Or sit at luncheons with the rest
Or watch kites fly above Wickham on a summer noon
Or look at others opposite us riding in a car
Or spend hours driving nowhere
Or fail to correctly pass through a doughnut drive-thru
Or share those smiles and hugs when needed.
These with the rest, one and all, are to us
miracles,
The who referring, yet each distinct and in its place.
Love,
JJ & J9*
